Reserve Income Replacement Program (RIRP)

1. Effective 1 August 2006, if you are a Reserve Component (RC) Soldier who is serving on involuntary active duty and have an income differential of more than $50 you may be eligible for RIRP.
2. The amount of RIRP paid is equal to the difference between an individual's pre-mobilization average civilian earned income and his or her current total military compensation. RIRP will be paid monthly for income differential up to $3000. To determine potential eligibility there is an online calculator, fact sheet and frequently asked questions; at <http://www.dod.mil/ra/>. This site also includes a printable version of a DD Form 2919 which is the form needed to request RIRP.
3. After the Soldier verifies substantiating documents with their personnel office and obtains command approval, the local finance office validates military compensation. Once the finance office checks are complete, the DD Form 2919 and substantiating documents are forwarded to the Defense Finance and Accounting Service (DFAS) for payment.
4. For more information regarding the RIRP, and other finance questions, call or stop by your local finance office.
